CORONER'S JURY.

Dr. Moore, the coroner, with the jury, Messre B. M. Graham (foreman), H. D. Kirk, J. H. Fisher, Kenneth Ogden, George D. Hopkins and Harrie White, met again last night at Mr. B Wheatley's undertaking parlors for the purpose of investigating the case of the collision be-tween an electric train and a wagon in charge of Mr. George Struder on upper King street on the 24th ultimo, which resulted in the death of Mr. Struder at the Alexandria Hospital Tuesday night. The jury was in session nearly three

Fred Albaugh, a Southern Railway fireman, was the first witness. He said the electric train which collided with the wagon was running at a speed of about 17 miles an hour. Witness said the motorman made no attempt to check the speed of the train. Struder's team was moving along easily at the time.

W. D. Hudson, luto whose drug store Struder was carried after the accident, told of his condition and the means witness resorted to in attempts to revieve

M. M. Bostwick, an engineer of the Southern Railway, testified that the train was making ten miles an hour.

Mrs. M. Adamson, matron of the Alexandria Hospital, described Struder's condition when taken to that Institution. The injured man told witness the horses bolted and caused the accident, T. L. Risheill was a passenger on the train at the time of the socident. He stated that the train was not running nusually fast, although the motorman had no time in which to stop the train when the team appeared on the track in front of him. The horses attached to the wagon were on a trot, witness said. They were going too fast to be turned out of the way of the train.

Dr. T. M. Jones, who was near the scene of the accident, said the train did not seem to be running unusually fast.

Walter Ale averred that the train was running fast, and that the motorman attempted to stop when he saw the team on the track. Witness said Struder's horses were walking and that he (Struder) waived his hand to the motorman and turned his horses to the east. No whistle or gong was sounded, nor were the brakes on the train applied.

Wm. Oehlert said Struder's lead horses were prancing and that the speed of the train was fast. Witness heard no gong or whistle sounded nor were the brakes applied. Struder waved his hand to the motorman and endeavored to turn his horses cast.

Ochlert was followed by Wilbur Cook, who said he and Oshler: were standing on the northwest corner of Klug and West streets at the time of the accident. His statement varied but little from that of Ochlert except that he testified that the horses were walking.

Dr. W. M. Smith, who rendered surgleal assistance to Struder, described the nature of the latter's injuries. He also described the result of an autopsy after Struder's death. Death seemed to have resulted from concussion of the The skull was not fractured. The doctor said every organ except the lungs was diseased, fatty degeneracy betime after the accident was Struder any more than semi-conscious, Hugh Wiley was the next witness-He stated that Struder's horses were walking at the time of the accident and that the train was making between 20 and 25 miles an hour. The motorman made ineffectual attempts to stop the the motorman.

P. J. Pulman was put upon the stand but he did not witness the accident and told only of the occurences after the ac-

When the train stopped he said the car in which he was seated in the center of West street Witness said Struder's horses were running as fast as the train, when he first saw them, and that the animals increased their speed. In fact he did not know whether they had ron away or that the driver was endeavoring to hurry scross the track. H. B. Kelly, motorman of the train, was put upon the stand. He said he surned off and reversed the current when the team reached the track. His train that the team reached the track that the team reached the track that the track that the team reached the track that the track that the team reached the track that the track that the team reached the track that the track t also sounded his gong, but he was too close upon the team to stop in time to avoid the accident. He stopped two squares west of the scene of the accident, and half a square had reduced the speed of the train by reason of boys being up-on the track. Kelly said Struder's horses were galloping, and that the train went one car length siter the accident. He said the train did not drag the horses; that the team really collided with the train, and the horses were running faster than the train. Witness said he supposed Struder was endeavoring to force his team across the track before the train. Chas. W. Simpson, gonductor of the irain, testified that the train had slowed down half a square west of the scene of
